Chapter 1 by Austin Miller

Robert walked up to the door, not knowing what was on the other side. He swung open the door and vanished inside.

Chapter 2 by Selena Raynee

Thirty years later a demolition crew found remnants of a marble-encrusted stone door in a basement of an old Victorian house. The house used to belong to a very wealthy family, but has been left unattended for decades after last of the family died out.

Chapter 3 by Hannah

The door thought to be a dead end zone was later removed all that was found was a small crawl space that looked as though it went on forever.

Chapter 4 by Harlander

The few people who lived in that unremarkable part of time gossiped about the unmarked vans that drove up to the lot where the wreck of the house stood. They whispered excitedly to each other about the figures, clad in black, who dragged strange cables and giant, boxy machinery out of the wreck of the basement. They milled about and made small talk as the vans drove away.

They'd complain about the low humming from the machines at all hours of the day and night for years to come. For some reason, though, none of them seemed to notice that all of the figures who'd entered the basement were never again seen to leave it.

Chapter 5 by Kat

There were stories that went around the playground saying there was a secret room and that there were people living back there that took the missing people and killed them back there.

Chapter 6 by Magdalene

But few knew what was actually there. What was actually going on. The boss of the crew who went inside the hole for instance. He knew. The overseer of the crew. He knew too. And every single person who went inside the hole knew.

The hole, and this might sound crazy, I know, is a portal. It leads to a land never ever seen before. A land millions of light years away. Only those who went inside the hole populate it. They survive and live as regular lives as they can. They cannot get back through the hole. In fact, the only way to get back was travelling so far that you'd die half way there. So they gave up. They live there making their own gossip and news, forgetting about the life they left at earth while their bosses whispered over what had happened to them. No one ever came back.

Except for me. Don't go into the hole. Don't run away if you went through. It's not worth it. No one is ever coming back.

Chapter 7 by Chloe

I am the only one who found the escape route. Nobody else will ever know about it. Except me of course. Because I am the escaped saviour. The one who will save all the trapped victims of the hole. The one to be famous and known throughout all lands. Well, that is what they say I will be. Will that possibly be me?
